USPA NEWS - 1947 Dutch Volkswagen Importer Mr Ben Pon, sketched the very first drawings of the Kombi Van. Two years later testing began on the Transporter prototype. In 1950 Volkswagen CEO Heinz Nordhoff releases the first production model of the Kombi Van from a factory in Wolfsburg. The rest is history.

The amazingly stylish 'DUB' has found a resurgence in the bridal industry over longer wheel based limousines that have difficulty negotiating small roads, tight bends that are virtually impossible to park without breaking a few parking laws. Reliable, sassy and unbelievably chichi the restored Volkswagen Kombi Van is the most in demand form of transportation to formals, special high profile events and even your Sunday wine cruise with half a dozen friends. Stylish Kombi tours owner and driver Jim Dickenson offers a personal interactive style of chauffeuring.

"My aim is to make my clients journey memorable and I encourage plenty of social media selfies of your trip.".Said Dickenson . "From high end weddings to earthy beach ceremonies we love simply talking to our clients about different locations , many of which are not accessible with conventional limousines or chauffeur services."

Dickenson went on to explain the vast flexibility and retro desire people have to travel from point 'A' to point 'B' in his Kombi reminiscent of the fashionable 50's and free spirited 60's through which the style elegance and collect-ability of the Kombi never faltered.

"We also provide winery tours with a difference, which includes an Australian style BBQ by the beautiful Swan River and a tour of the swan valleys hidden gems and boutique winery's that big coach tours can't drive to."

Dickenson went on to say , " We can offer many different tours ranging from birthday parties, school formals , airport pickups or just a picnic at the beach for the romantics. Imagine lounging on camper chairs in the great outdoors drinking a glass of champagne whilst watching the sun go down over the Indian ocean!"
